Turner Dairy Farms Brings Milk from Local Farms to Local Families for 80 Years!

(PITTSBURGH, PA) September 15, 2010 – Turner Dairy Farms, a longtime fixture of the Western Pennsylvania agriculture scene, has officially become an octogenarian as 2010 marks the local family company’s 80th Anniversary.

“My grandfather started Turner Dairy Farms with the simple principles of perfect products, perfect service, treat people right,” says Chuck Turner, Jr., third generation president of his family’s dairy business. “As we reflect on our 80th Anniversary we know our company is all about the people who make up the Turner Dairy Farms’ family, including our local farming families, our local employees and their families, and our dedicated supporters,” continues Turner.

In the 80 years since its founding the Turner Dairy Farms name has become synonymous with high quality, local products. While Turner Dairy Farms’ milk has been the foundation of the brand, decades ago products such as farm fresh sausage, turkeys and other from the farm offerings were also popular. While these products are no longer offered, consumers have become quite fond of Turner’s extended product offerings, including their premium iced tea products, fresh cream products, and a variety of cultured dairy products.

Founder, Charles G. Turner knew that setting a “higher standard” for quality would help establish and differentiate the Turner Dairy Farms name. Charles believed strongly in utilizing the local agricultural bounty of Western Pennsylvania to realize his vision of a “higher standard.”

“We’re extremely proud of our long standing commitment to support local family dairy farms as we understand the importance that local agriculture has on not only our family business, but also the socioeconomic fabric and economic sustenance of Western Pennsylvania,” explains Turner. “We’re proud to bring the highest quality products from local farms to local families.”

As the decades have gone by Turner Dairy Farms has continued to focus on producing the highest quality milk and dairy products. This focus has yielded many national accolades including three first place awards for their 2% White Milk at the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wisconsin.

“We look forward to keeping the Turner Dairy Farms name viable for generations to come,” explains Turner.

Turner Dairy Farms’ products are available in convenience, grocery, and natural food stores throughout the Pittsburgh area. For more information visit www.turnerdairy.net.
